'N'
'ROUND

We notice in an exchange sheet that a Mr. and Mrs. George R. Deschi have brought suit against Mr. and Mrs. W. Kimball, neighbors.

It seems that the two families, have forgotten the name of the town where they reside, had a little trouble over noise.

The Deschies have asked $50,000 damages as the result of injury caused to their health from the noise caused by two dogs and several roosters in the Kimball yard.

The case was in the superior court when we lost track of it.

Speaking of animals, a plaintive mewling awakened slumbers in the 22nd street exclusive residential section this a.m.

Searchers for some time failed to find the cause of the disturbance although it was literally under their noses.

Finally it was discovered to be an infinitesimal kitten, for some reason known only to itself, trying to climb the rear wall of a garage.

A herold gentleman vaulted a fence into an unoccupied yard and returned with the tiny animal.

I've seen lots of small pets of various sorts but I don't think even baby mice came this wee.

It was an enterprising little beast, however.

It's eyes were wideopen and it was extremely independent—witness the attempt to scale the garage wall.

When its rescuer picked it up, it made wicked little "Baer" passes with its microscopic paws trying to defend itself.

The kitten later took kindly to a bowl of cream and when last seen, was dozing peacefully on an old curtain.

It could have made a comfortable divan on a powder puff.

JOE DEMAGGIO
HITS 50 TIMES
CONSECUTIVELY

SEALS STADIUM, San Francisco, July 14.—UP—Joe Demaggio, 18 year old Contra Costa outfielder for the San Francisco Seals, walked to the plate in the first inning tonight, hit the first ball offered him and broke a record that has stood since 1915.

The clean single tonight's game the 50th consecutive in which "Dead End" Joe has hit.

Jim Oglesby, first baseman of the Los Angeles club, that opposed the Seals, continued his own private hitting spree by singling in the first. He has hit in 37 consecutive games.

U. S. Plane
In Crash

SEATTLE, July 14.—UP—Plunging downward at high speed, a navy plane late today nose-dived into Elliott Bay, crashed and rolled over on its back.

The two navy pilots were saved by navy speedboat crews, it was reported.

The plane was believed to be one attached to the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, anchored in Puget Sound.

Misses Dorothy Pasch, Jean Williams and Betty Williams are vacationing at Camp Newau.

Court Spoils
'Bon Voyage'
Party In S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—UP—The "bon voyage" party of the Leong Chung Lee family was started by the United States government today, with the result that Mrs. Lee and her five children reported on the liner President Coolidge minus husband and father.

A warrant, sworn out because of the alleged failure of Lee to file bankruptcy schedules after the partnership firm of Tong, Sung & Co. Sacramento, had gone into bankruptcy, caused all the trouble.

Lee's inability to post a $500 bond made it impossible for him to leave the custody of the court.

The rest of the Lee family barely made the boat after a flying trip from the Federal building to their pier.

Attorney Fails
In Suicide Try;
Declared Insane

MARTINEZ, July 14.—An insanity warrant for Hamilton Bauer, San Francisco attorney and candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor of California in 1914, today was asked by his daughter, Miss Hamilton Bauer.

She told Deputy District Attorney Warren Cunningham that her father had this morning attempted to hang himself to a chandelier at a Concord home where he had been visiting.

She said that the attorney had recently suffered a nervous breakdown and that she feared repetition of the self-destruction attempt.

Bauer's suicide was frustrated before he was seriously injured.

The Bauer home is at 1153 Clay street, San Francisco.

NISSEN IN CHARGE

State Traffic Officer Charles H. Nissen of El Cerrito is acting head of the Contra Costa squad. He is taking the place of Captain George Belon, while the latter is enjoying two weeks at Lake Tahoe.

T. A. Tomasini, self-styled promoter of a bridge and tube between Albany and Marin county, yesterday was granted an extension of time on its construction by the War department.

The new permit was given Tomasini, it is stated, to enable him to seek Federal aid in financing the project.

At the same time Maury I. Diggs, associated with Tomasini, announced in Oakland that the Reconstruction Finance corporation is expected to grant a loan in the "immediate future" and the building started ready to start work on the $35,000,000 project within 30 days thereafter.

Ready To Start

"Preliminary work has been going on for several weeks," Diggs said. "As soon as the government acts we will be ready to go ahead with actual construction, employing from 1000 to 1500 men."

The project calls for construction of a combined bridge and tube from Point Fleming, Albany, to Bluff Point, Marin county, consisting of 19,000 feet of trestle and 17,000 feet of tube.

Franchise Granted

The Alameda County Board of Supervisors granted a franchise for the project several years ago, with the proviso that Tomasini should file a $100,000 performance bond within 15 days after issuance of a War Department permit.

The permit was granted a year ago and the board allowed Tomasini six months to file the bond. Last January it refused to grant any further extension and declared the franchise forfeited.

The board also has pledged itself not to grant any new franchise to projects which would compete with the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge—in accordance with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's demand when it granted a $62,000,000 loan to the California toll bridge authority to finance the latter project.

J. Cooper

John Law

When Joseph Cooper, colored of Berkeley, drove a truckload of purchased articles off the Richmond-San Rafael ferry last evening, he found a delegation to welcome him.

He was not given the keys to the city, however, but was told to right about face and return to Marin county. Richmond officers who waited him were quite emphatic with this order and Cooper without question returned on the same ferry that brought him across.

At the San Rafael end, Sheriff Walter Sellmer awaited him joyfully with a long list of causes to detain him.

For some time, it seems, Cooper has been journeying to Marin county where he allegedly loaded his light truck with desirable things from ranches in the district when the ranchowners were not about to question him.

Richmond authorities for quite a while have observed him leaving the ferry on this end. Although regarding him with suspicion they could find no reason to stop him.

Hurrying to the ferry, the sheriff discovered that the boat had pulled out with his quarry aboard, triumphant over his escape.

The Richmond police, with alacrity, stepped into the breach and sent the craftless dorkie back. His wife and child were with him.

They were placed on a street car and permitted to return to their home, 1634 Oregon avenue, Berkeley.

The C. C. Cornell's have moved to a new residence on Dunn street.

F'Heaven's Sake!
Are the Princes
Going to Work?

CHERBOURG, France, July 14.—UP—Two of the trio of Mdivani princes, Serge and David, sailed tonight for the United States aboard the liner Hamburg, intent, they said, on a career of business.

"We intend to spend five or six months in the United States to fight efforts there to deprive us of our fields, of which we are the legitimate owners," said Serge.

"What about the divorce suit by Mae Murray?" he was asked. He married the actress, and she is asking for a divorce in Los Angeles.

"If Mae Murray wishes a change," he said, "I shall not contest the divorce."

David, who is being sued for divorce by his American wife, Mary McCormick, opera star, hurried to say that the same was true in his case—he had no intention of contesting.

The princes admitted they obtained visas to enter the United States only at the "eleventh hour," explaining the delay was caused by a "misunderstanding" in the cable correspondence with Washington.

The third prince Mdivani, Alexis, recently married Barbara Hutton, heir to $20,000,000 of the Woolworth 5 and 10 cent store fortune.

Grand Jury to Consider Many Items Monday

With its business for the year about wound up, the Baldwin Grand jury will next Monday consider activities of the county's social service and welfare groups, the school supplies department and extension of the authority of the purchasing agent to purchase all supplies for the county jail and food for prisoners.

It was said that welfare department attaches and employees from Richmond to Pittsburg and County Auditor A. N. Sullenger are among those who have been called to appear before the jury for a review of welfare department work and activities and county expenditures.

It was not made known the exact trend which the review will pursue. It is reported that a representative of the state welfare department will be present also.

Report had it also that the jury is scheduled to reach a definite determination as to whether additional indictments will be returned in the school department inquiry and it is understood that proceedings will be directed generally to report salary rebates.

The jury indicted William Wales and S. L. Orrett, former storehouse supplies keeper, on grand theft charges in its school department inquiry.

Orrett was convicted but a jury disagreed in the trial of Wales, Oakland sporting goods salesman, who is now awaiting re-trial.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 14.—UP—Negotiations between wary kidnapers and the politically powerful O'Connell family for the return of John J. O'Connell, Jr., apparently centered tonight in New York City.

The abductors, who demand $250,000 ransom for return of the heir to the political influence of the O'Connell name, a third and "more acceptable" list of intermediaries. The names of these were to be published in three New York newspapers.

John Slans, Note

The new note was signed by young O'Connell himself, allaying fears among members of the family that he might have come to harm.

The two previous lists, at the command of the kidnapers were published in Albany newspapers.

This sudden shift to the metropolis, in the opinion of persons close to the O'Connell's indicated that the handsome young national guard officer, abducted a week ago, probably was being held in or near New York City.

Shortly after receipt of the new communication the new list of intermediaries, in three separate sets of names, each appearing in three New York City newspapers, New York World Telegram, New York Sun, and the New York Journal.

What Mans considered significant was the fact that one of the new go-betweens, suggested by the O'Connell's, was Sylvester Ross, an intimate friend of the late Jack (Lexus) Diamond and who was questioned by police after the gangster's assassination in a rooming house two years ago.

Well Known Sports

Others on the list were men well known in Albany's sporting circles and included Jim O'Connor, owner of the best known cafe in the capital district. O'Connor, an intimate of politicians, also is owner of the St. Regis club in New York City, and is a former Nevada and Havana saloon keeper.

The new communication, like its predecessors, was found in the private postoffice box of Daniel O'Connell, uncle of the captive and one of the political rulers of Albany.

It reassured the family the young man was safe and unharmed but expressed dissatisfaction with the list submitted 72 hours earlier.

Although negotiations appeared centered in New York, it was considered significant that none of the three lists of contact men contained addresses. This was construed to mean that the kidnap gang apparently was familiar with the identity and whereabouts of the preferred intermediaries.

HANDICAPS
RESCUERS

NEW YORK, July 14.—UP—The blazing oil tanker Cities Service Petrol, sank stern first off the North Carolina coast at 11:30 o'clock tonight carrying the captain and two of the crew to their deaths, according to a midnight message to the Radio Marine Corporation.

The message, from the steamer Gulf Gem, which had been standing by with the steamer Tri-mountaine since about nine p. m., said that 34 members of the crew had been rescued from the decks of the burning tanker in life boats.

Sticks With Ship

It was believed that only three men perished, although the Cities Service Petrol registry revealed that she usually carried 38 men.

The captain, whose name was not immediately available, refused to leave his vessel, the Gulf Gem reported.

The rescuers were handicapped by rough seas and the fight was on against time as the flames gradually engulfed the boat.

Miller is a retired Standard Oil employee. He entered the services of the oil company when it was in its infancy and holds the record for being the oldest living employee in years a service, having served 54 years before retiring.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller have two sons, Jack R. Miller and Charles A. Miller, both of Richmond. Also two granddaughters and two great-grandsons, of San Anselmo, Calif.

Their many friends join in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Carquinez Bridge
Acquisition Urged

A demand that the toll bridge across Carquinez straits be taken over immediately by the State Toll Bridge Authority was made yesterday in a letter and resolution addressed to Governor Rolph by the Federation of State Societies of Northern California.

The letter said numerous complaints had been received from tourists for not to pay tolls and expressed the opinion that toll bridges constituted a serious barrier to the development of the State.

Tolls of the Carquinez bridge, the resolution stated, can be reduced approximately 70 per cent within a few years if not entirely eliminated before the franchise expires.

Speaking Of Sports

ST. LOUIS—UP—An unusual hero of major league baseball diamonds is E. C. Steffen, St. Louis merchant.

Steffen, well-to-do, firm dealer holds the record of being a member of two teams, the St. Louis Cardinals and the St. Louis Browns, but his name never has appeared in an official box score nor does he receive a cent of salary for performing yeoman duty on the pitcher's mound.

Steffen's boyhood ambition was to be a big league pitcher, but he never made the grade. Instead, he entered the fur business and became successful. His love for baseball, however, did not die out.

So, daily at 12:30 p. m., he has his chauffeur drive him to Sportsman Park. When the Cardinals are at home, he wears a Red Bird uniform. When the Browns are here he wears their official regalia.

For 20 minutes each day, Steffen pitches in batting practice. Then he takes a turn in the field to slash flies.

He once played with Milwaukee in the American Association, but his arm went bad and he never realized his ambition of becoming a major league hurler.

Baseball Menu
For Local Fans
Boasts 2 Games

The baseball menu for Sunday in Richmond isn't quite as tempting as it has been on other Saturdays, and yet there will be two pretty nifty games on tap for the fans.

The Palace Market club will take on the Central Ice company of Oakland at 2:30 p. m. The 2:30 o'clock game. This is a league game and no doubt will be hotly contested from start to finish. Le Gault and Crocker are scheduled for the battery job.

The Lambricht nine will play the Central bank team of Oakland at First Street. This game also is set for 2:30 o'clock.

Out of town games in which clubs will participate are the Richmond Produce Smith's game at Concord and the City Recreation-Silvera Grocery battle at Richmond Park, Oakland.

These two games are league affairs. Should the Recreation boys win they will have a good chance to get into the Northern California tournament later in the season. Sobert, former University of Santa Clara athlete, will do the catching for the Recreation club. Horne is booked for the mound job.

Do the Trojans
Want to Kidnap
Husky Coaches?

SEATTLE, July 14.—UP—When coaches Al Erickson and Tom Bolles of the University of Washington champion varsity and freshman crews did not return from Long Beach, Cal., with crew members, rumors again were revived the University of Southern California might be dickering with them for their services.

After Washington won the national regatta last Saturday it was definitely stated the Trojans would take up rowing as a major sport.

When quizzed concerning the U. S. C. rumor regarding the Husky coaches Captain Herb Mjors of the Washington varsity said:

"There are rumors, but that's all I know. Everything is quiet. There is nothing official."

Erickson and Bolles will arrive in Seattle Monday by boat and plan a two week's fishing trip on the Skagit river.

Several Thrills
At Cerrito Track

El Cerrito greyhound patrons enjoyed several thrills Friday night. First, Lightning Wire, one of the famous My Laddie pups, popped home with a remarkable victory on his debut, well backed, and looking like a million dollars. Then double options on Brownie E., in the second and Tillie Rock in the fourth returned $190.00, with both being liked by many. And finally, secondary options were high with Lady Gog at $50 and Good Taste at $75, topping the secondary department.

Tonight El Cerrito offers a particularly high class program of eleven events. The double option ninth looks to be one of the best balanced races in quite a while with Evening Starlight, Kansas Ghost, Mad Miser, Master Myatt, Eclipse and Mrs. S. E. Ellis' Gold Boy in contention.

SPEED FIENDS
SEEK RECORDS
AT SAN JOSE

SAN JOSE, July 14.—Prediction were flying thick and fast tonight that either Al Gordon or Mel Kennedy will shatter the track record at the San Jose speedway Sunday afternoon during their battle for driver honors in the special series of races scheduled for them. The Kennedy-Gordon affair is being held in addition to the regular automobile and motorcycle program, already announced by Manager Lynn Mathewson of the speedway.

Gordon holds the present track record at the El Cerrito speedway in Los Angeles, has brought Danny McPherson's fast Miller Special to San Jose for his speed feat with Kennedy, also in a Miller, and the way Al got around the oval this afternoon led many to believe that he can crack Eric Triplett's mark.

So keen is the rivalry between Gordon and Kennedy, 1928 Pacific Coast champion, that neither appear on the speedway this afternoon while the other was on the track. Gordon got first crack at the course and pronounced it faster than it has ever been before. Then to prove his assertion he went out and unofficially cracked Triplett's present record by a tenth of a second. Incidentally this mark has been hanging for two years.

"Oh, yeah," remarked Kennedy when he got onto the speedway. "Well if I can do it I can do so him one better." Which he properly did, lowering Gordon's time by a tenth of a second, or bettering Triplett's record by a fifth of a second. Inasmuch as both speeds were caught by stop watch neither will be accepted by the A. A. A. contest board, it was announced.

PASTOR URGES EDUCATION FOR MARRIED LIFE

MILWAUKEE, July 14.—Scientific education for marriage was recommended today by Rev. Edwin T. Dahlberg, pastor of the First Baptist church, St. Paul, in an address at the general session of the International Christian Endeavor convention here.

"We educate people to be bankers, blacksmiths, teachers and tree surgeons. Why should we not educate them to be intelligent husbands and wives, fathers and mothers, also?" he asked.

Dr. Dahlberg cited the Los Angeles Institute of Family Relations as an example of the type of clinic he favored for the dissemination of knowledge concerning marriage and parenthood. The first marriage clinic, he said, was founded in Vienna in 1922, as a part of the city's department of health.

An intelligent appraisal of friendship before marriage is essential for "intelligently falling in love, and building happy homes," said Dr. Dahlberg.

Lindberghs End 400-Mile Jump

CARTWRIGHT, Labrador, July 14.—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed here at 4:45 P.M. (E D T), today from Newfoundland, on their route-charting cruise over the north Atlantic.

They made the 400-mile flight from Botwood, Nfld., in less than three hours, averaging nearly 120 miles an hour.

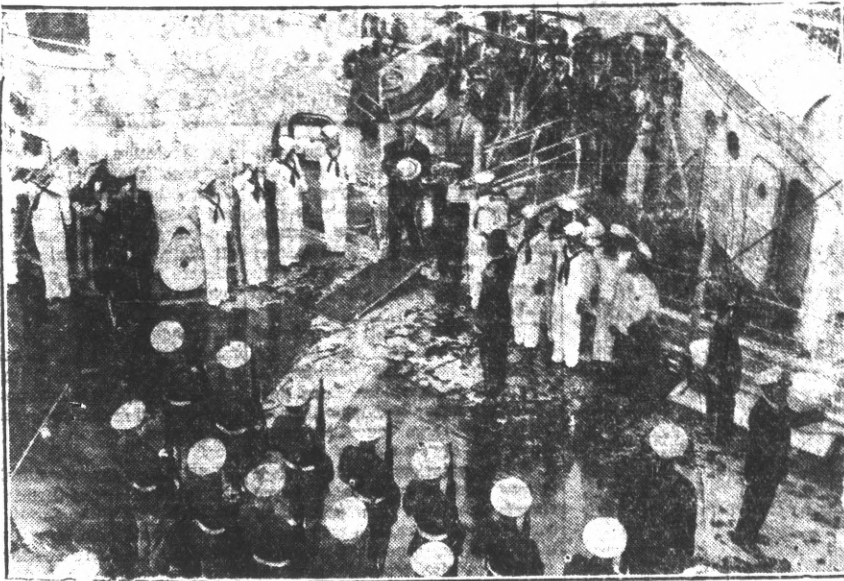

Throngs which had greeted the 24 Italian seaplanes only two days ago cheered lustily as the flying colonel brought his big black and red ship, with its vividly looking white pontoons to a smooth landing on the surface of Sandwich bay here and taxied to a mooring for

Girl Scout Notes

Due to the location of Camp Farsaway Mine, gold panning was one of the most attractive features of the program. The pioneers took several over-night trips, packing about eight miles back into the mining district.

There, they witnessed hydraulic mining and panned for gold, although their efforts were apparently fruitless.

The inhabitants of the locality were delighted to see groups of small, green clad figures dotted here and there along the river, busily plying their pans, wash basins in many cases. So even the younger girls enjoyed the experience nearer to camp.

Living in camp is a vivid part of a pioneer program for comfortable beds must be made up and filled with pine needles. Nests must be constructed from boughs lashed neatly where personal belongings may be stored. Clothes hangers were made and wash stands built.

The most unique contrivances were the outdoor kitchens which each of the older units made for use when eating out of camp. No nails are driven into trees. There fore, some splendid lashing was necessary in order that shelves be fastened securely among trees.

Contest Board Gives S. O. Gas Another Award

Tackling the much debated subject of anti-knock performance of leading Pacific Coast gasolines, the American Automobile association contest board announces that the results of its extensive road tests show Standard gasoline is unsurpassed.

The anti-knock investigation is the fourth of a series authorized by the World War act. Captain E. A. Rickenbacker, now national chairman of the A. A. A. contest board.

For each of the previous tests covering starting, acceleration and mileage, Standard gasoline's unsurpassed rating was also certified by the board.

Anti-knock comparisons were made entirely by contest board officials under the direction of R. W. Marland, Jr., committee member, and used the cooperative Ford Research road test method, strictly the only anti-knock test acceptable to the U. S. Bureau of Standards.

A stock model car raised up with the instruments required for C. F. R. tests was used to submit the leading western gasoline under study to a total of 200 tests.

The test car approached a hill at 20 m. p. h. At a signal it was fully accelerated. Observations were made until speed dropped to 10 m. p. h. on a steep hill.

"Our purpose in requesting these tests," stated an official of the Standard Oil company, "was to secure an unbiased and authoritative report upon which the motoring public could confidently base its conclusions."

It is only natural that the various refiners of gasoline should make enthusiastic claims regarding so important a factor as detonation, and we are deeply gratified that all our own laboratory and road tests have been confirmed by the 'unsurpassed' rating given our product by the leading independent automobile authority in the country.

40 HOT DAYS IN VIEW, SAYS CLO. LEGEND

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Tomorrow, July 15, is St. Swithin's Day, and if you take any stock in legends, put away your umbrella and get out your coolest clothes, for it looks like 40 days of hot, dry weather ahead.

That isn't a weather bureau prediction, but Uncle Sam's forecasters have some statistics that point that way—if you believe in the St. Swithin's Day legend. The weather bureau, incidentally, does not.

If it rains on St. Swithin's Day, so a 1000 year old legend runs, it will rain for 40 days thereafter. And if the sun shines on that day, many a drop of rain will fall for six long weeks.

The Weather Bureau makes no long range predictions, but it does map trends that the weather is taking. The trend so far this summer (since June 1 in Weather Bureau records) has been decidedly hot and dry.

And by the way, who was St. Swithin?

One version of the legend says he was an English bishop who died in 862 A. D. a century later he was made a saint, and it was decided to move his burial place within a church.

But on the day his remains were to be moved, there began a storm that lasted 40 days and nights. This was taken as a sign of heavenly disapproval, and the saint continued to lie where he was.

BIG PROGRAM BOOKED FOR FOX SCREEN

"The Working Man" which is opening tomorrow at the Fox theater, stars George Arliss in a role that is entirely different from any he has portrayed in his long career on stage and screen.

As "The Working Man" Arliss is just the man next door, a regular fellow who is more concerned with what you are than what you have.

He can lay aside his one boss worries and wisp about the future, or the bread of labor to you.

But when the weather is nice, he is a modern day, in his own way, with the common people.

He sees beneath the thoughtless surface, the real human stuff that he knows lies in the money pocket of youngsters.

Betty Davis, a blonde star, has the leading role in the wild drama of Arliss' business rival and the other leading roles are portrayed by Gordon Westcott, Theodore Newton, J. Farrell MacDonald and Hardie Albright.

Joe E. Brown Today

Followers of Joe E. Brown, will see the variation of the role of a probably the greatest role of his lunch-making career at the Fox theater today as "Elmer the Great."

Joe was seen in the stage version of this play, written by Rine Landauer and George M. Cohan, a few months ago in San Francisco.

Lawyers Row at Filipino Trial

MARTINEZ, July 14 (Quibb) over the whereabouts of the account books and minutes of the Caballeros de Bion Alamo, the accused most of yesterday's session in the murder trial of seven Filipinos.

The books have apparently disappeared completely from the scheme of things as no person yet failed to present a knowledge of their present location.

District Attorney James Hogg, in charge of the prosecution, yesterday called to the stand three grand officers of the lodge and questioned them concerning the records.

All denied knowledge of the books and refused to admit ever having seen the minutes of the meeting on November 20, at which Mrs. Corvina Noriega was said to have been sentenced to death for infidelity.

Four more officers are to be subpoenaed for questioning, it was indicated.

A coroner has not yet been called to the District Court of Appeals, San Francisco on the latest charge of negligence to free Mrs. Noriega's relatives and Pastor Southman, witnesses, failed for continued in refusal to testify.

Both have gained liberty on $500 bail.

Hamilton MacDonell, the well-known Fox director, was followed by Universal executives to hold the reins on the film, "The Working Man."

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, July 14—New Yorkers who used to chuck into the family bus of a Sunday and venture forth into the not-so-quiet spaces, heretofore have changed their habits this year. That is, they still are not going, but not with the spontaneity of the past.

The roads are still so crowded on hot Sundays that one has difficulty in making how anyone ever does get anywhere. Long lines of cars, bumper to bumper, stretch in two or three lanes for miles along the approaches to the city.

And the notorious Sunday driver is very much in evidence. Cockeyed signals shoot out from cars at all sorts of odd times, and every one in a while someone gets impatient enough to risk his neck and the collective necks of his entire family and the kids' pet dog in order to get six feet ahead of the procession.

You'd think that a multitude of wheels like this would mean some business for the roadside stands and the stand keepers must think so, too, for there's hardly a square foot of the Beacon Post Road that isn't occupied by a place for cars and people to pick up refreshment. Yet business is not so good.

LAST SUNDAY we noticed one to Westport, Conn. Leaving the city of the lights and the sea, we reached the center of the town. It's about 15 miles from Broadway.

We passed an attractive roadside restaurant and gas station labeled "Elsie Piller's Place, Conn."

The brakes squeaked as a wave of recognition hit us, and fourteen eyes turned to the car and looked in all directions before we pulled out the road.

Inside we found a rooming cur and New Yorkish booths, plus two of the most beautiful waitresses we ever saw. And the proprietress was no disappointment, either—she was Elsie Piller, daughter of Harry Piller, the race of the theater ten years ago. Now, with husband Douglas, Elsie is in the hot dog business and like all the roadsters, complaining that motorists never stop any more. They just keep on going—and here's their fault.

BACK IN 1929 we were in Paris at the outbreak of the Folies. Before the billboards proclaimed that the reddest had captured the heart of the year, Harry Piller, who had scored a tremendous success as the dancing partner of Gaby Deslys and now was paired with Astaire, she of the $100,000 legs.

HOLLYWOOD, July 14—UP — When Adolphe Menjou ventured to remark that a properly trimmed mustache would add 100 percent to a man's sex appeal, he was prepared for a certain amount of kidding.

But not, he says, for the bushels of letters from women begging detailed drawings and photographs of the sexy lip follicles.

Menjou isn't complaining about the deluge of mail. He's going to answer the girl in Wichita, the matron in Denver and the beauty in Atlantic City who cruelly suggested a mustache, even Adolphe's, is only a hairy exorcism on the upper lip. What sacrifice!

But Menjou will show them. He's run several lawnmowers, and electric clippers and a spade masher through the well-known mustache. He believes the result will double his s.a. and that the same can be accomplished by most any man.

Menjou, who will try out the mustache while emoting with Carole Lombard in Jesse Lasky's "The Worst Woman in Paris" has certain established ideas on sex appeal.

"In the good old days before roller skates, when a woman's 'do' meant just that, a twinkling toe and a mouse-like foot meant something," he says.

"But the toe no longer is romantically associated with feminine charm and the mousey foot, robbed of its lure, is just a pedal extremely added to corns. The anatomical menbers suggesting sex lure have shifted upwards from foot to face.

"In a woman it is lips—in a man, mustache.

"Nowadays women realize that a mere display gets nowhere, and in result the face is being featured by the alert girl zong after her man. That most women would rather be kissed by a man with a mustache! I guess it's my intuition."

Mary Briggs, who sings in her uncle's night club, becomes engaged to Jerry Dugan, a young "racketeer." She tries in vain to persuade him to quit his lawless profession. His power steadily increases, but two rivals he has ousted, Mickey McNeil and Larry Burke, are out to "get" him. Angela, a girl who would like to win Jerry's affections, comes to his quarters and tells him that they are coming to her apartment that evening. He ends his fascination to lie in wait for them. Meanwhile, Angela waits in his apartment.

CHAPTER XXII
IT WAS while Jerry was at the restaurant with his bodyguard that the phone in his quarters rang. He had said nothing about incoming calls.

"Hello," came Angela's soft Latin voice. Mary Briggs was a shock and almost made her stutter.

"Is Mr. Dugan there?" she asked.

"No," came the answer. "But he will come. Who shall I say?"

"Who are you?" countered Mary, a thump in her throat.

"Oh, just a friend," came the reply.

MARY hung up. A sudden terror gripped her. All the accumulated fear of her life flooded her with anxiety for the fate of the man she loved. Who was this stranger in Jerry's apartment, and why was she there?

Mary pulled on her little hat, slammed the door to her apartment behind her, jumped into her roadster, and sped for Jerry's.

Three unfortunates in the second floor lounge room assured her that Jerry and his bodyguard had just gone out to eat. They saw no reason why she should not wait for him in his quarters. They did not know that Angela was up there. So they let her in.

Mary paused at the door from the hall into the long drawing room. On the long divan before the fireplace she saw Angela lying.

Angela heard the steps crossing the rug.

"I wait so long for you, Jerry," she said, sitting up to face with a start an enraged Mary.

MARY and Angela recognized each other immediately from Jerry's housewarming party. But neither could quite place the other. There had been too many at that party.

"But I don't know I have wait so long for him to come," complained the beautiful Angela, eyeing the other woman.

"How did you get in here?" demanded Mary.

"But he said I was to stay here now," Angela answered, realizing that there was one with whom she would have to fight for Jerry's affections.

"Who are you, and why does he want you to stay here?" Mary asked, a catch in her throat.

"Bring it in," countered Angela.

Mary drew herself up. "I am Mary Briggs. And I have every right to be here," she flared.

The sound of the front door closing silenced them both.

Retail Sales Tax Approved

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—UP—A retail sales tax that will not exempt foodstuffs or other necessities was tentatively approved for recommendation to the legislature by the joint tax committee of the senate and assembly here today.

Although deciding upon many of the things that will be taxed the legislators did not determine the rate to be proposed.

One thing appeared certain from the deliberation—virtually every pocketbook in California will feel the effect of the tax, designed to offset threatened deficit of $125,000,000 or more in the state's biennial budget.

Mass Suicide for Professors Suggested by University Head

CHICAGO, July 14.—UP—Mass suicide by college professors would be better than surrendering to the academic revolution, President Hutchins of the University of Chicago, declared today.

Speaking at the opening session of the Institute for Administrative Officers of Higher Institutions, the American young university president warned against "turning out of business" higher learning into business corporations, and deplored the practice of budget balancing by reducing educators' salaries.

"At a time when academic freedom is more necessary than ever," he said, "we must not let ourselves be tempted to hedge on our principles."

President Hutchins said "It would be better for us to commit mass suicide than to yield, for we yield we cease to be institutions of higher learning and become business corporations."

"Rather than lower standards, we must contract our operations. We must preserve academic freedom no matter what it may cost us now."

Mrs. C. B. Forbes of the West Side has returned from a visit at Napa.

After several enjoyable months in Washington, Mrs. Elsie Thelma has returned to her home, Santa Fe avenue.

U. C. WILL NOT INCREASE FEE

BERKELEY, July 14.—No increase in fees for students will be ordered by the University of California, although income has been materially reduced for the coming biennium.

This was the announcement today of President Robert Gordon Sproul in making known action by the regents.

Rather than add to the financial burden of students in time of depression, President Sproul states that the regents have decided to effect savings by curtailing activities and drastically reducing salaries in various departments.

President Sproul's statement was made in announcing an apparent raise in incidental fees on the Berkeley and Los Angeles campuses.

On the Berkeley campus the incidental fee for the new semester will be $26 instead of $25, while on the Los Angeles campus the fee will be changed to $23.50 instead of $22.50.

"In reality this is not an increase," says President Sproul. "It merely is a step to simplify the fee structure of the University by eliminating small fees of $1 and less, and the gymnasium suit fee for men and women. Heretofore these fees have been charged separately, necessitating separate accounts and involving more bookkeeping and expense in collection."

"The regents hesitated to take any action that gives the appearance of increased expense for students, but with the state appropriations for University purposes cut to such a small figure, it is necessary to save every cent possible. Consequently the small fees have been combined with the incidental fee, not for the purpose of increasing University income but for economy of operation. We hope, through this plan, to effect a really considerable saving."

Science Ever Alert to Solve the Riddle of Cancer

WE ARE daily confronted by startling publicity about cancer. No one discounts the extreme seriousness of the cancer situation. The figures in the mortality reports, whatever the source, keep this dreaded affliction well at the very top of the causes of death. The fact that it is a disease of the future is pretty sure to be the end of an established cause of cancer is worse than the unspeakable suffering incurred by the cancer victim.

THERE are certain methods of procedure when serious problems confront us. One of the methods is to refuse to admit that the problem calls for special research. Some folks get a certain amount of comfort from keeping the troublesome thought out of mind. Another way is to fret continually over the possibility of having cancer. Perhaps someone else has had the disease in the family connection. Every small lump or scale on the body surface is magnified into alarming malignancy. The third and best way is to face the problem, study it with courage and intelligence, and see what can really be done to insure a reasonable amount of immunity for ourselves and our loved ones.

FOR nearly four years now, we have been forced to find solutions for problems and perplexing situations that we formerly side stepped or ignored. In this time, some amazing facts have come to light in our understanding. The radio-activity of light rays in powers of penetration and heating is another thing that has shown us miracles of accomplishment. The increase of endurance of metallic substances as proven in sustained airplane flights is another remarkable development. And all the while, the field of medical research has not seen an idle moment in the attempt to establish human understanding and resistance.

FORTUNES in both money and brains have been expended in the hope of further safe guarding human health and comfort. That many minds are occupied with the specific subject of cancer proves that the subject commands a very general interest. The vast amount of publicity given it shows that expert knowledge makes no attempt to minimize the deep concern the topic arouses in every serious consideration. There is still a great variety of opinion as to the exact character of the cancerous growth, whether it begins in and is confined to the epithelial cells or invades the connective tissues only, is of little concern to one suffering from the malignant disease.

THE most general opinion rests upon the fact that cancer is an abnormal development of basic cells, those cells that are responsible for the continual rebuilding of the human body. A cancer in general parlance is supposed to eat into the surrounding tissue. The findings of science would rather prove that the undue multiplication of basic cells in a particular spot breaks down and crowds out the normal cells surrounding that spot. It is a distinction without a difference that the sufferer from cancer can appreciate.

THE fact, however, is plain why surgery is sometimes able to successfully remove a cancerous growth and again is a hopeless failure. In another article, we shall continue the topic.

MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "When a young woman rises to give an elderly woman her seat in a trolley car, what should she say?"—M. L.

ANSWER: "Take this seat, please," or some similar polite phrase.

QUESTION: "Is it good form to sign one's self in the following manner, 'J. Henry Smith'?"—Harriet P.

ANSWER: The best form is to write one's name out in full. If one initial is used, it should be the middle initial. "John H. Smith." If the first initial is used, the middle name should be initialed also. "J. H. Smith."

HOT wind, a blazing sun, dust and hard water are a combination of beauty hazards that are difficult to combat, but it can be done and without too much effort, too. If you go about the matter skillfully, the effects of the sun and wind can be offset by the use of plenty of dust, dust means that the skin must be cleansed with special care, but hard water is a more serious matter.

All across these farm lands of ours and in many of our small cities the water is alkaline or filled with lime and other mineral solutions. No skin can be subjected to such water for any great length of time without suffering—yet soap and water are the best cleansers for the skin and you must use them. There are two things that you must do—first catch every drop of pure, soft rain water that you can and use it for washing your face and for your shampoos. For bathing and for washing your hands, use borax or some other commercial water softener in your pump water.

I promised to tell you about the evening beauty routine, didn't I? Begin the evening routine with a scalp massage and a swift, thorough brushing of your hair. What was it your grandmother used to say—one hundred strokes? Well, maybe you do not need quite a hundred strokes, but you do need a lot of brushing to keep your hair healthy and lustrous.

Brushing removes all the dust and foreign matter that day hair catches during the day. It stimulates the normal action of the oil glands in the scalp and it distributes that oil down the length of each hair keeping it soft and polished and preventing dryness or breaking. Brush with long, vigorous strokes, under-brush your hair and up, first, and then up and back. Finally brush your hair into place and pin it away from your forehead and neck so it will not interfere with your cleansing.

Do your hair brushing first, since there are bits of dust and dead skin from the scalp that drop down onto the forehead and neck, and should be removed by your cleansing. Thorough cleansing.

Now take a basin of rain water, a wash cloth or soft complexion brush and a bar of bland soap, and scrub your face, neck, arms and hands thoroughly, working the soap into the pores. If you haven't the facilities for a quick, easy bath, then take a sponge bath after cleansing your face. Have the wash cloth sop-ping wet and well soaped. Then rinse thoroughly and end by slapping your face, throat and chest with very cold water.

If your skin is the type that is inclined to be dry, apply an all-purpose cream, smoothing and patting it into the skin with light up-and-out massage movements that will keep your skin taut and smooth. After this application of cream, some women like to dip their fingertips in very warm water and repeat the movement. This hastens the absorption of the cream or oil. After ten minutes, wipe away any cream that is not absorbed and finish by splashing the skin with very cold water or by going over it with a pad of cotton dipped in a mild skin tonic.

While you are waiting for the ten minutes to elapse, work a little of the cream into your hands and especially around your cuticles. Push the cuticles gently back with a soft towel or with an orange stick tipped with cotton. Use a pair of sharp scissors and snip away any torn bits of cuticle that might cause hang-nails. A touch of olive or a bit of nail polish touched to the stop will often prevent the skin from tearing further.

These brief beauty steps should not take you more than twenty minutes altogether, but they will insure your loveliness for years to come.

Healthy Babies' Needs
Plenty of play in the open air. The drinking of one quart of milk a day.

The brushing of teeth both morning and night.

The use of cod liver oil to put on weight and add vitality.

Plenty of fresh vegetables, both cooked and finely chopped raw ones.

Less candy and ice cream between meals. These should be eaten as a dessert after a meal.

Storing Valuable Rugs
Valuable rugs should never be packed with moth remedies. Clean well and roll up in plenty of freshly-printed newspapers, then wrap in heavy wrapping paper and seal securely top and bottom, so that moths will not have access to them.

:: SPEAKING OF STYLE ::

By HELEN VAIL

New York — We have had so many strange things dumped on our broad shoulders this summer, that a frill or two cannot make any difference. What can be done with ribbon plus pleating is a lesson we might well make excellent use of before the summer's over.

Women are always relieved when they see a possibility of wearing frocks the sleeves of which are of a different fabric than the dress. It is a make-over idea de luxe, and one that is immediately pounced upon by the thrifty who go in for remodeling. Not that every dress, the sleeves of which are different from the body, is remodeled by any means.

Apparently we are getting reconciled to larger sleeves and to sleeves of varying length, even the rather trying bracelet length which is well below the elbow.

Black Satin
Any good dress other than one of a strictly summer variety, that one invests in now would naturally be expected to be worn into the coming season. This being the case, one certainly has no hesitancy in advising a black satin dress as the next addition to your wardrobe, particularly since satins are plain or crinkled. This naturally brings to mind that every indication points to rubbed silks being also good. The tendency toward this type, Ottoman as some call it, is traceable to the great success of pique and materials with a corded surface.

Medium blue satin and flag blue chiffon, both with pink contrast, were chosen by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for some new summer evening gowns. A colorful flowered chiffon print on a black ground was selected also, this in a formal garden party costume consisting of long gown and two-third length skirt, unlined coat. It is believed in some quarters that Mrs. Roosevelt's fondness for blues will serve to keep them in the fall fashion picture, despite the big "run" on all blues this spring and summer.

The ensemble is white flannel with full length tailored coat and the high necked slipover is black jersey with an anchor motif through which is slipped a rope necklace which continues down the waist and fastens at one side.

A swapper coat in black and white crossed barred linen has a big black line bow tied under the chin. It tops a white linen frock with pleats at knee.

SUMMER MEALS EASY TO MAKE

By JUDITH WILSON

JULY is an exciting month for the homemaker — it provides such a variety of new fresh things for delightful meals. There are many ways to use the new things in meals that are light and in others that are substantial. Summer meals should all include plenty of cold foods, crisp salads, fresh fruits and cool beverages. Yet every meal should include at least one hot dish, and I suggest that you let your oven make that contribution in the form of hot muffins, biscuits, crisp salads, meat or vegetable casseroles or cookies that come to the table warm and fragrant. The luncheons given above are extremely simple, yet they are so well balanced and attractive that you would be proud to place them before your bridge club or extra guests. Both the entree and the dessert in the first menu are contributed by your oven. Use a cookie sheet for browning the meat puffs, for biscuits and for cookies if you want them to bake quickly and to brown evenly on all sides.

Corned Beef Puffs
To make the meat puffs, beat two egg yolks until light and two egg whites until very stiff. Mash two and one-half cups of corned or homemade corned beef hash with a fork until it is finely crumbled then fold in the egg whites and mix thoroughly. Drop by spoonful onto a greased baking sheet and bake in a broiling oven or very hot oven until light and evenly browned. Serve with a sauce made from one-half cup of catsup, one-fourth cup boiling water and two tablespoons of finely chopped sweet pickle. Garnish the puffs with parsley sprigs and serve immediately with a few potato chips on each plate.

Dutch Peach Cake
The dessert takes advantage of the luscious peaches that are coming in from the South. Sift and measure two cups of flour then sift again with three teaspoons of tartaric baking powder or two and one-half teaspoons of phosphate baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon and two tablespoons sugar. Cut or rub in one-fourth cup shortening. Mix together one egg and one cup of milk, beat well and add to the dry ingredients. Stir quickly and turn into a well greased pan. Cover the cake with quartered, peeled, fresh peaches and sprinkle generously with cinnamon and sugar. Bake in a moderate oven until done. Serve with cream.

Molded Crab Salad
To make molded crab-meat salad, soften two tablespoons gelatin in one-fourth cup water, then dissolve it in one-fourth cup of boiling water. To this mixture

Strainers are easy to keep clean, if a stiff brush is used. Wash in hot sudsy water.

When fruit is plentiful is the time to look ahead to the fall and winter, when it won't be. In short it is coming time to stock up with jams and jellies. Don't procrastinate. Think rather of the piquant taste they will give to all your meals next fall and winter, of the wonder they'll do with omelettes and salads. And get to work.

Do you know that strawberries keep better if stored in a cool, dry place? Do not wash them unless they are being prepared for immediate use.

You and Your Child

MEET A CHILD ON HIS LEVEL

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

CURIOSITY is an impelling force in young childhood. A child asks "why" persistently, because he has a need to know. Nothing surprises or shocks him. He accepts all information equally, as wonderful facts that help explain a wonderful world to him. Let him know, let him know, let him know.

He notes our attitude toward politics, the church, the stars, sex and human relationships, and makes it his own. It has occurred to me that if we studied his actions intently as he studies us, practically every parent would be a child expert. It has been my observation that most parents are not so interested in "knowing" their children as they are in knowing what they can do for them.

Wherefore and Why
The parent-child relationship abounds in paradoxes too numerous to mention. These keep parents and guardians going around in circles. Unlike our children we are easily surprised or shocked or otherwise fooled by appearances. What a pity, that by the time we are ripe for parenthood our imaginations should have become so dulled by everyday living that we should have ceased long ago to ask ourselves "why."

There is hardly a modern parent who has not heard before this that he should meet the child on the child's level. It is a fine sounding phrase, but one which few of us stop to analyze. To meet a child on his own level does not mean that we are to go into second childhood before our time and romp with them. Rather it means that we should try to grasp his point of view.

All Children Good
Children are often punished for no other reason than that we do not look for the motive behind their deeds. If they have disobeyed us or damaged another's property, we accept their guilt as a foregone conclusion, it simply being taken for granted that the crime was deliberately planned.

Many mistakes in child management could be avoided if parents stopped to ask "why" before passing sentence. Every child is entitled to a hearing and a chance to make good.

Paring Knives
When buying a new paring knife for the kitchen, be sure to buy the sort with the blade that runs through the center of the handle and is fastened by rivets. It is much stronger than the sort where the blade is held by a metal ring.

In Poaching Eggs
If eggs are poached in milk they will be found to be unusually delicious, besides having extra food value.

The Fighting Chetwodes Carry On . . . Albania's Marriage Feuds

MORE than five centuries ago, when Richard of the Lion Heart rode to the Crusades, a Chetwode of Chetwode went with him. For that service he was knighted by his king. Yet the ideal for which he fought remained unfulfilled until 1917 when Sir Philip Chetwode, at the head of his cavalry, rode into Jerusalem which he had helped deliver from the Turks.

Today we are concerned with this little, red-haired cavalry leader, who in the early days of the World War smashed the German Uhlans and who now guarantees England's peace in India and guards her remote frontiers in Asia. Sir Philip Walhouse Chetwode is the fighting member of a fighting family.

Although Sir Philip comes of an old fighting family his ideas of warfare are modern. Great Britain's problem in India is one of mobility and Sir Philip is a great believer in mobility. "The next war," he has frequently said, "will be one of maneuvers, not of position."

Educated at Eton, where he made a reputation as an athlete as well as a scholar, Sir Philip, the seventh man to hold the Chetwode baronetcy, entered the army by joining Queen Alexandra's Own Royal Hussars, a famous British cavalry regiment, when he was twenty years old. His father was Lieut. Colonel Sir George Chetwode, a hero of the Crimean War. Sir Philip made sure that the military tradition of his family would be preserved by marrying Hester Stapleton-Cotton, the daughter of another prominent cavalry officer, Colonel Richard Stapleton-Cotton.

Winning many honors in the Boer War, Sir Philip staged one of the rare cavalry charges at Cery in the World War. He wrote home, "We went through the Uhlans like brown paper." In 1916 he was transferred to Egypt where his talents as cavalry leader could have wider play. He took command of the Desert Mounted Corps and distinguished himself by a decisive surprise attack at Rafah which resulted in freeing Sinai from the Turks.

When Allenby took supreme command in Asia Minor, he took Sir Philip's plans. The latter played a distinguished part in the advance on Jerusalem, and when the Holy City had fallen, Allenby declared the victory was largely due to Sir Philip's strategy and tactical skill.

SOME years ago when King Zogu of Albania broke his engagement to marry, he took a step which has caused many violent family feuds among his people. It also brought to mind the old marriage customs of the Albanians.

Albania's social customs are as unique as the country itself. They have retained their ancient customs with a certain tenacity. Centuries of foreign invasions have not done much to alter the soul of the people.

Still, some of their customs have been jolted a little and among the first to go to violence against them was King Zogu himself. While he was a staunch believer in preserving the cherished traditions of his country, he was compelled, for reasons of State, to break his engagement. Now breaking an engagement in Albania is a serious offense. Feuds of the most violent sort have sprung up as a result and often entire families have been wiped out. One of the devastating effects of betrothal feuds, engagements have now taken a new aspect. It used to be the custom to have infant engagements. But a large proportion of these early promises became very costly. Either the boy turned out to be a bad offshoot of the family tree, or else the girl did not come up to expectations. Then one party withdrew his early pledge and the offended party started a feud. To do away with this, wise parents have gradually abandoned infant betrothals.

Smart Linen Suit
The outstanding favorite of this summer is, and will continue with increasing prestige to be, the linen suit in one form or another. Sometimes it is the white or blue or other tailored jacket costume. Sometimes it will be this same type of coat topping a one-piece frock. These are the favorite fashions for summer.

Holes in Screens
If you have a few large holes in the window screen, and yet you feel they will last the season if mended, take a piece of mosquito netting and place over the hole. After that dries, give it another mending and perhaps a third. It will dry stiff like the rest of the screen and answer your purpose.

NO SET RULES FOR PUNISHING ERRING MATES

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

THE washing of one's private linen in public has never been an approved practice. It is no longer necessary to go lower oneself, for there appear to be laundries that do this very thing for us, under one guise or another, as for instance, the psychologist, with his sessions for investigation.

ONE has recently been held in Chicago, and during the survey the very vital matter of public hygiene has been discussed, with the object of getting at the cause for this great evil of domestic sins, and the remedy or punishment resulting.

IT is easy enough to theorize on this question, but confronting it with it as a personal problem, it is difficult for the injured man or woman to regard the matter in the pure light of reason alone. Psychologists may have won us over to the theory that infidelity is not the result of a change of heart, or even a strong, overpowering attraction for someone else, but a desire to wreak vengeance or revenge on one's mate.

IN ORDER to be moved to any such revenge, it is first necessary to have been injured by the one we really love. Seems a little oblique, but there is no doubt an element of truth in it. Many an erring wife has been more concerned with getting square with her spouse than she has been interested in the man both obliging and obligingly near. It is not to be taken seriously, surely, that a desire to give it for tat is the only reason for infidelity.

THIS would imply that men always love the woman whom they are married, and that women invariably love their husbands, which, unfortunately, is not always the case. Among the tragedies of marriage may be counted the possibility of meeting someone after marriage, who is one's real and only love. Such a tragic state of affairs does not imply dishonor. Such a love may come without seeking and persist with no outward manifestations.

ALL infidelities are not the result of either revenge or unbridled emotion. Unfortunately, there are men and women who have no respect for marriage vows and no serious intention of keeping them. These are the natural philanderers, who never should have married anyone and who are not ever likely to improve their ways.

IT DOES not make sense to blame such lapses on anything or anybody but the philanderer. He or she needs no discord in the home in order to do them over the garden wall after stolen fruit. The fault lies entirely in themselves, and the man or woman who draws such a will-o'-the-wisp had best leave them to their own devices and take up some more worthwhile pursuit.

BUT whatever the cause, what shall the remedy be? According to Gretta Palmer, writing for The New York Evening Telegram: "Five hundred and seventy-eight couples were queried on their probable action if they should have the misfortune to discover the infidelity of the mate to whom they were, presumably, deeply attached. The possible courses of action, ranging from 'Kill wife' to 'Analyze the causes which led to wife's action and try to remove them,' were mentioned."

"The answers differed very widely: (1) Try to surprise the lovers and get a divorce; (2) secretly separate from the partner, bringing other reasons for the separation to the eyes of the public; and (3) try by all possible means to make the interloper ridiculous in the eyes of his or her affection."

THEORIES all. No one can lay down any hard-and-fast rule of behaviorism, since circumstances and temperament invariably alter the case. The law is very clean on the matter. The fact that all cases of infidelity do not end in the courts only goes to prove that each husband and wife have their own standards and methods of dealing with what is bound to be a very unpleasant situation, no matter how ultra-modern we may become.
